Everybody's Talking

Countless cookies: Those looking for fancy cookies to wrap up and give to friends, or to devour themselves, need look no further than Lorena's Sweets. The brand is the brainchild of Costa Rican confectioner, Lorena Rodriguez, whose collection has something for everyone. Rodriguez always loved baking cookies, and her husband convinced her to go into business. Now, she has many molds for a wide variety of shapes, which she ornately decorates with fondant. Buyers can order any shape, from a horse on a carousel to the Eiffel Tower to a grandfather clock. The options are almost limitless!

Caring for raccoons: There are dog whisperers and horse whisperers, and now Canada has its very own raccoon whisperer. His name is James Blackwood, and his home is near the forest in the province of Nova Scotia. Back in 1999, his late wife, Jane, rescued an injured raccoon, nursing it back to health and releasing it. The cute mammal returned for food, along with its babies. That was the beginning of the couple's daily ritual of feeding the raccoons. Before she died nearly 20 years ago, Jane asked James to keep caring for the raccoons, and he's been doing it ever since, often posting videos on social media.

Bowling news: The sport of bowling will never be the same again! An entrepreneur from Southfield, Michigan (U.S.), has come up with an interesting idea: a mobile bowling alley. Terence Jackson Jr. calls his creation Luxury Strike Bowling. A two-lane bowling alley is built inside the trailer of a 53-foot (16-metre) semi-truck. The inside is decorated with colourful lights, a theatre screen, and elevated seating. The game played is "duckpin," which employs shorter lanes and lighter weight balls than the five- or 10-pin varieties. The bowling-alley-on-wheels is available for parties and events.

Yellow tree: Needing to make a reservation to see a tree is unusual, but that is the case in China's Shaanxi Province. At a temple in the Zhongnan Mountains stands a 1,400-year-old ginkgo biloba tree. The reason this specimen is so popular is the beautiful scene that ensues when it starts to lose its leaves. The leaves turn a brilliant yellow-gold, making them look as though they were painted by a giant artist's brush. The fallen leaves surround the tree in a sea of yellow. The sight attracts so many tourists that, to avoid large crowds, people must reserve the day and time of their visit.

Did You Know...

Trained mechanic: If your car broke down in the 1940s, you could have asked the future queen of England to fix it. Queen Elizabeth II was 18 when she joined the Women's Auxiliary Territorial Service and trained to become a mechanic and military truck driver.

No brainer: Woodpeckers can slam their beaks against a tree up to 20 times per second without suffering brain damage because of their unusual skull and tongue structures. They have impact-absorbing adaptations other birds lack.

Margherita pizza: Many theories suggest how the Margherita pizza got its name, but the most common is that it is named after Queen Margherita of Savoy. She was visiting Naples and asked a local pizza maker (or pizzaiolo) to make something special for her.

No pockets: Women's fashions seldom included pockets until the mid- to late 1800s. One theory is that pockets represented independence, as did the pants that women started to wear around the same time.

Invisible plant: Fritillaria grows in the Himalayan Mountains, but the plant camouflages itself against rocky backgrounds and can be hard to find. Used for over 2,000 years to make a cough treatment, the plant evolved to hide itself to avoid being picked.

On the Lighter Side

Two men meet on opposite sides of a river. One shouts to the other, "I need you to help me to the other side." The other guy says, "You are on the other side."

Old refrigerators never die. They just lose their cool.

Did you hear about the new dance called the "Elevator"? It has no steps.

Why shouldn't you write with a broken pencil? Because it would be pointless.

What about the guy who stole calendars? He got 12 months.
